It has come to my attention that the Metro Board has no limits on the number of terms one can serve, allowing one member to remain on the board for 36 years - is this correct?

It strikes me that for unelected positions, this unreasonably opens the door for certain power and influence abuses, and also unreasonably limits the talent and broader perspective that more turnover might bring to this body, something we need now and will need even more urgently in the future.

Please consider reviewing and correcting this situation.

Thanks,

Nadene Thorne
